INTRODUCTION

The coastal belts of India are the hub of economic growth and technical progress, and Jamnagar District in Gujarat is no exception. Jamnagar city which, houses the Marine National Park and Sanctuary (MNP&S) is a reservoir of ecological wealth besides hosting a number of industries particularly between Vadinar and Sikka. But the challenge is how to have the modernization that is in harmony with nature? It is possible only by joining hands and discussing it from a common platform. This is the crucial time to ensure the marine ecosystem which is the treasury of ecological assets of the country be part of the framework in the protection, conservation and most important the development of the coastal areas. This requires combined efforts of all the stakeholders i.e. the government, big and especially small industries, municipality, NGOs, local communities etc. The existing long-term ecosystem research and monitoring programs by reputed institutions in Gujarat and elsewhere form an excellent working baseline to start from.

Integrated Research for Action and Development (IRADe) is a scientific and research organization based in New Delhi (www.irade.org) is currently undertaking a project on the Ecosystem Management of the Marine National Park, Jamnagar funded by the Ministry of Environment and Forests, Government of India. Through multi-stakeholders consultations, we could collectively address long-term ecological and environmental concerns of this biodiversity-rich area. Keeping in view the rapid industrialization and other developments in the area, the stakeholders are required to have their development and management plan in a sustainable manner. In this backdrop, IRADe is organizing a workshop on “Stakeholders consultation on industrial development and conservation of Marine National Park, Jamnagar, Gujarat on 3rd March 2009 at Cambay Resort, Gandhinagar, Gujarat.

OBJECTIVES

The purpose of this inception workshop is to mainly discuss the partnerships from all concerned sectors in the preservation of Marine National Park. It is also expected to share the studies and work that have come up on the subject and how to go ahead further in minimizing impacts on the marine ecosystem.

STAKEHOLDERS AND TARGET AUDIENCE

Major stakeholders are from State Departments such as Forest Department, Gujarat Industrial Development Corporation, Gujarat State Pollution Control Board, Gujarat Infrastructure Development Board, Gujarat Tourism Corporation, Department of Ports and Transportation, District Administrators, Jamnagar Municipal Corporation, etc. Other includes ISRO (SAC), GEC, GES, GEER Foundation, and private industries such as ESSAR, RELIANCE, TATA Chemicals and other industries, Port developers and managers, urban planners, Universities, Civil Society Organizations (CSOs), NGOs, etc.

EXPECTED OUTCOMES OF THE WORKSHOP

- Multi-stakeholders' consultation on the various issues of conservation in and around the Marine National Park.
- Designing roadmap for better management of marine environment.
- Stakeholder recommendations on proper conservation and monitoring of the coastal area and the mangrove ecosystem.
- Developing code of conduct for industrial activities that help conserve marine biodiversity.
